London 1839-40

* * * More charming table books, than the above, cannot well be imagined. As picturesque delineations of the various styles of domestic architecture which, from time to time, prevailed in England, they have been unequaled; and the artist has succeeded in throwing a life and spirit into them, which renders them far superior to mere views, and afford us many delightful glimpses into the Life of Olden Times; enabling us, as it were, to live again in the stately halls of our ancestors, and join in their revelry.
